

Given that the Bell companies operate lines which are erected on public right of way, and considered a necessary part of our society, it only seems in the best interest of society in general that those lines be available to other isp's have access to these lines in a non-discriminatory manner. The consumer, such as myself, gets more, better, cheaper choices when the playing field is kept level for all competitors.